Leigh Mars is a Senior Consultant with the Executive Search practice of Ratliff & Taylor. Her primary focus is to serve as the Lead Search Consultant on senior-level and complex talent acquisition engagements. Leigh is known for building exceptional relationships with clients and candidates, assessing needs, mining passive candidates and consulting on current labor market trends. Leigh also has responsibility for the systems and processes that support the executive search practice.

Just prior to her current role, Leigh was the Vice President of Search Operations, a key leadership role and she is credited with overseeing the practice during a period of significant growth and success. Her focus on metrics propelled the practice to exceed national standards for time to fill, search completion and retention.
